It seems that the Government have decided to permit the missionaries to travel freely in the interior and to undertake evangelization work So far as we can gather this is not due to any 12492 sense of gratitude which the Japanese entertain for missionary labours, but simply to the fact that as the country has no established religiou the authorities desire the emissaries of all creeds to have a free hand. But whatever the cause the missionaries have reason to refolded for liberty to travel on the strength of certificates from the Ministers of their own nationalities will enable them to pursue their labours under much less irksome conditions than those under which their efforts have previously been cribbed, cabined, and confined. It will be interesting to notowhether the additional privileges will increase the number of proselytes. There is no field of missionary labour so promising as Japan. The Japanese have practically abandoned their old crards, in many ways they have adopted European customs and habits; will the Christian religion with its universal sympathies commend itself to the and doctrines are so widely divergent P

HERR FRIEDENTHAL'S PIANO-FORTE RECITAL.

Unfortunately it is not often that we in may direct attention to the real practical a tiele Hongkong are permitted to enjoy a programme of high class music performed in a style distinctly of the first rank. When such opportunities present themselves, however, cannot be preed that there is any reluctance to recognise them, and the large and appreciative audience in the St. Andrew's Hall on Tuesday evening was a case in point. The occasion was a musical coirée given by Herr Alb. Friedenthal, a pianist well known in all continental cities, whose abilities are of an order which fully entitles him to the reputation which he has won. To endeavour to keep the attention of an audience for two hours by a performance upon one instrument is a severe task, and none but a master could hope for success. Herr Friedenthal fully attained this andmore. Bis programme was a well selected and varied arrangement of the classical composers, and at no time during the evening was the nationoe of the his audience wearied. Another apportunity, we are glad to note, for hearing Herr Friedenthal will be afforded on Saturday evening, when a Grand Concert is to be given in

of the great orchestral musician were done full justice to. This somewhat stormy introduction in which four very evenly matched crows will was appropriately followed by the soft and meet. The American and Garrison Cups are melodious Berceuse of Chopin and the lively Valse Posthumée of the same composer. Both these pieces displayed the true artistic feeling of the performer, whose execution both of delicate and atentorian passages was always governed by an appreciation of the fitness of things. Three short but lively items were next rendered in turn, succeeded by two Hungarian dances and a gavoite of Gluck, which was one of the prottiest things of the evening. Chopin's Polonaise in A Flat concluded the first part of the programme. The recital was resumed with that grand creation of Beethoven, the Moonlight Sonata, which seems to traverse the whole gamut of human feeling in its alternate plaintiveness and passion. The interpretation f Herr Friedenthal gave adequate expression to the varying moods of the piece and merited the enthusiastic applicuse which it received. A little melody of his own composition was followed by a skilfully manipulated performance with the left hand of the "Lest Rose of Summer." Perhaps, however, the desirability of such more exhibitions of dexterity is to be questioned. A familiar valse from Faust was followed by two very charming melodies of Thome which showed the artiste's powers to advantage, and the Rhapsodie Hongroise of List was also given with vigour and bril inno-This concluded a most enjoyable intellectual treat which will well bear repetition upon the next occasion.
